

Ancelma,

First, this email from the high school student is indicative of the quality of teaching climate that you have provided. Kudos to you for not only your instructional methodology, but also your enthusiasm for teaching and working with our youth. I agree with her – You are an AMAZING TEACHER!!!!!!

Thank you for sharing,

Julie Benavides

From: Ancelma Sanchez

Sent: Thursday, June 01, 2017 12:03 PM

To: Benavides, Julie

Subject: Fwd: Child Development

Ancelma Sanchez, M.A.Ed;

Program Director

Child Development Consortium of Los Angeles

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Esbeydi bahena

Date: Wed, May 31, 2017 at 9:14 PM

Subject: Child Development

To: Ancelma Sanchez

Dear Professor Sanchez,

I hope you're having a good night! I was informed by my peers that I needed to let you know of my participation in El Día de Los Niños in order to receive the extra credit. It was an amazing opportunity to be able to interact with children and be able to do something nice for our community. In the same way, I believe that I also made the best out of this class. I learned material ranging from pregnancy to adolescent life. For instance, I really enjoyed chapter 16 which had to do with adolescent psychosocial development. In particular, I liked learning about bad habits that teenagers could pick up and about depression and suicide. I think that especially for us teenagers, it is relevant and we should be aware of what we could come in contact with. In addition to that, I personally think that everything we learned can be tied together to help us develop a wider range of thought. What I mean by this is that we realize that something might occur due to multiple factors, not solely one. An example of this could be seen in depression itself. Not just one thing will lead to a person becoming depressed, multiple will. And I think that everything we have covered in this class help us develop that deeper comprehension and ability to see connections. With that being said, I feel like I have really learned a lot from this course and I am very grateful for that. You were an amazing professor! The time went by so fast! Thank you for everything! I hope to see you again soon!

Sincerely,

Esbeydi Bahena