A Retrospective

Sept. 13 to Dec. 6, 2014

Legendary visual artist, Roberto Chavez, grew up in East L.A., earned his MFA from UCLA, and joined the East Los Angeles College (ELAC) faculty in the 1960s as a pioneering educator in the Hedding Chicano Studies Department.

More than sixty artworks dating from the late 1940s to the present are included in this retrospective. Subjects range from self-portraits to portraits of friends and family, as well as works that reference socioeconomic and political conditions of the time.

A full-color, 48-page catalogue with original essays by co-curators Sybil Venegas and William Monroe accompanies the show. Venegas writes about the impact Chavez had as an educator and mentor on students and artists; she also focuses on the controversial 1979 whitewashing of the ELAC mural, The Path to Knowledge and the False University. The catalogue is made possible with support from the Union Pacific Foundation.

Study of Studs

Sept. 23 to Dec. 6, 2014

Roya Falahi (MFA, UCLA, 2006) is known for her large-format photography in which she combines portraiture with tableau compositions. Falahi's striking images resonate with visual and psychological impact—they are technically flawless and often deeply ambiguous. As viewers, we are often given the opportunity to witness the subject's gaze; the artist often depicts herself or herself obscured by a veil or silhouetted visage.

Study of Studs includes the artist's latest text-based pieces that are crafted from the same studio she often uses for her head overviews. Informed by a variety of sources—from current global-political contexts and Iranian American culture to hard rock music and fashion imagery, Falahi's work investigates contemporary issues of identity and culture.

Study of Studs is presented in conjunction with this fall's Los Angeles/Israel Arts Initiative (LAIA), coordinated by the Los Angeles Department of Cultural Affairs.

Related Events:

This year, fifty-six artworks were selected from more than 250 submissions. Students who have taken a class in the studio art, architecture, or photography departments within the past academic year were eligible to submit their work for consideration.
