Gathering the Pieces by Carol Lem

Before the air leaves the page
I will write a line to come back to after the last paper is graded and Monday’s plans are down.
I will tie the end into a beginning and add one more piece.
— from “Spring Break”

“There’s something wondrous about this collection. In an age that’s produced relatively few love poems, each of Carol Lem’s seem to rise from love—of friends, teachers, the art of teaching, the art of learning, and music, the bamboo flute, the notes, the silence between them, the hush at the end.”
— Suzanne Lummis
